ADVERTISEMENT.

THE Compiler of this little Book, has ventured its coming into the World, with only a Dedication to those of his Majesty's Subjects whom it may concern, and if his Undertaking does but answer his Intention, in being of concern to all, it will then prove of that Utility he designed it, and most amply recompence him for his Labour, which has been infinitely more than can be imagined from so small a Volume.

A Preface being a Tribute, expected by, and due to the Public, from all Writers; the Compiler is somewhat at a Loss for a proper Apology for not complying with the general Custom; but the Truth is, he has no more to say, than what is contained in the Title Page, wherein the Bookseller has been very explicit and happy in pointing out the Design and Utility of this little, but he hopes useful Performance.

RULE 141. This syllable has the sound of shus, as in Ig ná tius (Ig na shus) &c.

U

RULE 142. In several words where this vowel follows g, and another vowel follows the u, the u is mute, as in guard (gard) guar dian (gard yan) but if e or i follows the u, they are sounded hard, as in guest (gesht) guide (gidh), &c.

RULE 143. In many words, u is sounded like yu, as use (yuse) usual (yu zal) &c.

U I.

RULE 144. In many words, this diphthong has the sound of i-long, as in build (bild) guild (gild) guinea (giné) &c.

W.

RULE 145. In many words this consonant is silent, before r, as in wrest (ress) write (rite) wright (rite) wrong (rong) &c.

WICH.

RULE 146. When these letters end the name of a place, they are sounded like idge, as in Green wich (Green idge) Nor wich (Nor idge) Wool wich (Wool idge) &c.

W.

RULE 147. This consonant is mute in many words, as in answer able (an ser a ble) whole (hole) whom (boom) two (too) &c.

X

RULE 148. This consonant at the beginning of a word, is always sounded like x, as in Xérxes (Zérx ez) Xénophon (Zén o fun) &c.

Y.

RULE 149. When ÿ thus accented comes in the middle, or at the end of a word, it must always be sounded like e, as in pit ÿ ing (pit e ing) lá-b ÿ rinth (lab e rimth) ar mÿ (armé) barleÿ (barlé) cop ÿ (cop é) &c. but in all words where y is found not accented, it keeps its own sound, as in the following words, viz. my, thy, oc cu py, de ny, multiply (mul te ply) cru ci fy (cru ci fy) &c.

ZIA.

RULE 150. These letters have the sound of zba, as in tra pé zia (tra pe zba). &c.

ZIER.

RULE 151. Have the sound of zber, as in brá-zier (bra zber) glá zier (gla zber) ó zier (o zber) &c.

ZIUM.

RULE 152. These letters have the sound of zham, as in tra pázium (tra pé zhum) &c.

RULE 153. When the following syllables, viz. ble, bre, chre, cle, cre, dle, fle, gle, kle, ple, sle, tle, vle, vre, and zle, do occur in any part of a word, (though they mostly are found at the end) the e is nearly mute, and the syllable is pronounced quick, as in sylla. sound. examp.	syll. sound. examp.	syll. for examp.

ble bl' áble	dle dl' cán dle	tle tl' cátle
nó ble	fád dle	fét tle
búbble	nód dle	tí tle
bre br' óm bre	fle fl' íát fle	ínót tle
sá bre	shí fle	tre tr' mí tre
chre kr' sépul chre	shúf fle	ní tre
cle cl' án cle	gle gl' éa gle	spéc tre
tréa cle	kle kl' rán kle	vle vl' sní vle
árr. cle	tíc kle	vre vr' lí vre
ún cle	ple pl' péo ple	stí vre
cre cl' á cre	shóp ple	zle zl' míz zle
lú cre	háfle	púz zle

But in cóm ple ment, and ac cól tro ment, the ple and tre have the sound of ple and tre.

Note. The accent is never on any of the above syllables, but if any of them end a word of two or three syllables, the accent is on the first, as in tá ble, bri ále, lé gi ble, vis í ble, &c. but in words of more syllables it is not always certain.

RULE 154. In whatever part of a word the following syllables occur, the accent is always on the preceding syllable; the syllables are these, viz.

cean	cient	geon	iar	ious	sier	tio
ceate	cies	geous	iard	jeant	sion	tion
ceous	cio	gient	iel	fcien	fias	tious
ceum	cion	gies	ieme	science	tia	zia
cia	cious	gion	ient	scious	tial	zier
cial	eon	gious	ier	feate	tian	zium
cian	cous	ial	ies	seous	tiate
cite	eur	iam	iom	fia	tie
cien	geance	ian	lon	fian	tience
clence	geant	iant	iour	fient	tient

Note, See Rules 17, 18, 19, 21, 22, &c.

But when any two of the above syllables come together, the accent is on the first of them, as in as so cia tion, (as so she a shun) con sciên tious, (con she én shus) &c. or if the word end with ity, then the accent must be always on the third syllable from the end) as in fa mil i arity, par tiality, and two or three others.

RULE 155. Their are several words which have no singular number, as gallews, snuffers, songs, vails, &c.

RULE 156. There are some words which have no plural number, as corn, milk, hail, ice, &c.

RULE 157. There are some words which are the same in both numbers, as mackarel, plaice, sheep, swine, &c.

RULE 158. Some words that end in s or se in the singular number, make the plural in ves, as calf (calves) shelf (shelves) life (lives) wolf (wolves) &c.

Before

Before I take my final leave of these rules I will just mention a few useful particulars, worthy the reader's notice.

I. All words which end in ety, ity, ical, ogy, or omy, have the accent always on the third syllable from the end, as in so bri ety, va ri ety, a bil ity, bar b̄ar ity, rob̄in si cal, chym ic al, as trō nō m ic al, a pō l o gy, as trō l o gy, as trō n o my, deu te rō n o my, &c.

II. All words that end in ory, have the accent on the fourth syllable from the end, if the word has four or more syllables, as in dis pēn sa to ry, pre p̄ar o to ry, pūrgatory; but if it is of three or two syllables, then on the first, as in rūp to ry, spō ry.

III. In words of two syllables, where a vowel ends the first, and another begins the second, the accent is on the first vowel, as in ri al, bi as, rū in, pō et, sū et, li ar, &c. and often in words of more syllables, as in im pi et y, pi ous l̄y, ex pi a to r̄y, in v̄i o la ble, &c. but these are not quite so certain.

IV. When a word of one syllable has a diphthong in it, it can take no e at the end, as in bead, creed, be liēf, loaf, mien, book, loud, maid, soil, laud, &c. but if f, v, or x, comes after the diphthong, they require e, as in lease, chafe, grieve, believe, booze, friends, &c. and if l comes after the diphthong, the l is not doubled, as in mail, soal, weal, fool, weil, &c. But in all other monosyllables bles, the l is doubled after a single vowel, as in ball, tell, roll, bill, full, &c.

V. We seldom find y in the middle of a word unless of Greek derivation, except before i, as in multi ply ing, &c. but if a word ending in y, has another syllable added that begins with any letter but i, the y is changed into i, as in try (trial) tried, bury, burial, buried, but burying, &c. but if o comes before the y, then the y is not changed, as in boy (boy ish) joy (joy ful) (joy ous). &c.

The foregoing rules being duly observed, will not only assist the reader in pronouncing each English word with the greatest propriety, but will greatly assist the memory in true spelling.

Explanation of the Plan and Abbreviations of this Dictionary.

s On the right-hand column stands for a substantive.

v Stands for verb.

a Stands for adjective, and

p Stands for particle.

Note, When you find two, or more letters so placed, they shew that word to be of those several parts.

" This stroke at the top of a word, and between two letters, thus (a'f) shews that the letter on the left-hand is to be sounded the same, as that on the right, as if wrote double, as in fin'ger (sing ger) &c. When ch, sh, &c. come come together, or after the stroke, they are likewise to be sounded with the letter, or letters on the left hand, as bachelor (bach chelor) cashier (cash beer) &c.

i When this italic i comes in any part of a word it must be sounded like e, as in am bi ent, ani mate, appli cation, &c.

Sometimes the stroke thus (a''c) between two letters shew that some letter or letters are to be sounded, that are not wrote, as in a''cid (as cid) li''quid (lic quid) and so in many words.

When a verb ends with an e, a point is put before it, to denote where the participles take place, for example, abat.e, ing, ed; is set down so for brevity sake; but is to be read thus, abate, abating, abated.

When the verb does not end with e, then the particles are formed by adding ing and ed to the infinitive. Ex. add, ing, ed, read adding, added.

Note, Many verbs take an additional letter in the active and passive participles, as abhor, ing, ed; read abhor, abhorring, abhorred.

Some verbs take in the passive a different termination, as for example, be.hold, holding, held; read behold, beholding, beheld.

Those parts of speech called by most grammarians, adverbs, we distinguish by adverbial particles, which are generally formed by adding ly to the adjective; for example, bitter, ad-jective, bitterly, particle, and are denoted through the dictionary thus: bitter, ly

TAV. 1874

The following New Books, for the Use of Schools, are printed for J. NOURSE and S. HOOPER, in the Strand.

I.
A NEW
D I C T I O N A R Y;
IN TWO PARTS,
ENGLISH AND FRENCH,
AND
FRENCH AND ENGLISH:

Upon a PLAN the best calculated to render the Attainment of the FRENCH LANGUAGE more pleasing and expeditious than any Method yet extant.

•• The Participles of the Verbs, as also their Conjugations, both regular and irregular, are laid down in so plain a manner, as to render them intelligible to the most common Capacity.—In the English Part, Mr. JOHNSON'S Orthography and accenting has been followed, in order to render the Pronunciation easy to Foreigners. And the GENDERS are added to this Part, which, though so very requisite to those who learn the French Language, has been omitted in all other English and French Dictionaries. Price 5s.

By M. ANTHONY FORNEY, French Master, at ETON College.
